

Positive Affirmations for Transition

Everything that can go right, will go right. (Bijan's Law)

Something good is going to happen today!

I work in a job I love. I work with people I love and respect, and they love and respect me.

I have much to offer and my skills are in demand, recognized, valued, and appreciated.

I am attracting the perfect job.

I meet the right people at the right time.

I am calm, poised, and successful in every interview.

I earn a good income that is more than I need to meet my expenses.

My income steadily increases.

I learn from every experience and I succeed in everything I do.

I work in a beautiful environment, and I have an easy commute.

How to work with affirmations:

Focus your attention at the point between your eyebrows as best you can. (This may take a little practice, so don't worry about it if it feels awkward at first.)

An affirmation is more effective when you hear your own voice saying it. Repeat the affirmation aloud - three times loudly, three times in your normal voice, three times in a whisper. Then repeat mentally, with eyes closed, if possible. Don't be surprised if the affirmation pops into your mind as you go through the day. It helps create a blueprint for your subconscious mind.
